Premier victories for Johanne Killi and Andri Ragettli at the FIS Freeski World Cup in LAAX

Reigning Slopestyle World Champion and local hero Andri Ragettli (SUI) wins ahead of Olympic Champions Alex Hall (USA) and Birk Ruud (NOR) and before an ecstatic crowd of fans at the Crap Sogn Gion over LAAX: "This is the first time that freeskiing has been part of the LAAX Open and to win right here is just incredible and mega awesome! I had to adapt one or two things because of the weather, but that's what makes a good skier, and I'm super stoked that my run worked out the way it did."

No stranger to the LAAX victory podium is Johanne Killi. As the first LAAX OPEN Freeski winner, the Norwegian completes the loop to the European Freeski Open, held in LAAX in previous years where she won in 2014 as a newcomer. Second place went to Sarah Höfflin, the 2018 Olympic Champion, while World Champion Tess Ledeux (FRA) came in third.

The concept of combining freeskiing with snowboarding was a huge success at Europe's most renowned freestyle event. Cruising through LAAX Snowpark just like the pros and, as of tomorrow, it's open again to all who want to.
